Dear Last Conservative,

Danielle Dudkowski

We wanted to thank you for coming to play at our school. Your assembly was unlike so many other assemblies that we typically have. We actually got to see a live band and not just a pull down screen. The best part is that you are a REAL band and not just our school band. Your performance gave us a chance to relax and have fun while learning important messages too. We loved that you brought John O'Hara to play with you. It was so cool to see one of our own students up on stage with a real band.

Your songs were great! We especially liked the stage effects and how you got the audience into the show. We're sorry that we didn't stand up but the teachers didn't want us to get out of hand.....sorry about the disturbance in the back of the auditorium; our school is not usually like that. We hope that you don't think that we are bad kids. We all enjoyed hearing you and we loved that you took the time to stick around and answer our questions. We liked the goodie bags too. We really appreciate that you did this concert for free. Many times we can't get good assemblies like this because we can't afford them.

We're really sorry to hear about your friend, but we will make sure that we learn from him and talk to someone about our problems. We now realize just how important it is to have an outlet for one's emotions. Some of us use writing, music, or sports as an emotional release, especially after a bad day. High school students have more pressures than most adults realize. We especially appreciated that you lived through the same day-to-day problems that we face; you are all role models because you worked through your problems and stresses and became very successful.

Another message that you shared was about popularity and the cost of popularity. We face difficult situations everyday. Choosing what is right over what is wrong sounds easier than it really is, and once doing what is popular is thrown into the mix, making the right decision is even more difficult. We realize that every decision we make will affect the rest of our lives, but the way you explained it and related to it made much more sense than when our parents and teachers lecture us.

Thank you so much again for coming to our school. We will never forget your performance or what we learned from you. Please come back again!!!

Sincerely,

Megan Sage
